

LILA STUDIOS — WEBSITE BRIEF

Website objective: Present Lila as an AI-native micro-drama studio today, while giving the website the visual feel of a modern entertainment platform. The competitor references are to be used only as UI inspiration — cinematic, dark, content-led, mobile-first and premium — not as a template for the website structure.

1. Header

Keep the navigation minimal: Lila logo | Our Services | Our Work | Why Lila | Connect. The Lila logo acts as Home. Connect should be visually treated as the primary CTA. The remaining links can scroll to their respective sections on the same page.

2. Hero

The first section should immediately introduce what Lila does. Use a strong cinematic or moving micro-drama visual with concise copy that establishes Lila as an AI-native micro-drama studio. The hero should feel entertainment-led, not corporate. The brand line “Drama, generated.” can lead the section, supported by a short explanation of the proposition. Include one clear CTA: “Explore Our Work”, which should take the visitor directly to the Our Work section.

3. Our Services

Explain the core business simply. The section should cover: Branded Micro-Dramas — vertical, episodic stories created around brands; AI-Native Production — end-to-end generative-AI production that removes traditional production constraints; and Distribution & Amplification — helping brands take the stories across their own social ecosystem or other digital/content-to-commerce environments.

4. Our Work

Showcase Lila’s films and micro-drama projects in a visually rich, entertainment-style format inspired by the UI references. Use strong vertical posters or video thumbnails rather than conventional agency case-study tiles. The work should feel like shows people want to watch. Where relevant, each project can show its title, genre, brand and a Watch/Play action.

5. Why Lila

This section combines How We Work and Lila’s mission. How We Work should explain the journey in a simple sequence: understand the brief, build the story, create through an AI-native production process, and prepare it for release/distribution. The mission should communicate Lila’s larger belief in Creative Independence — AI matters because it gives storytellers and brands the freedom to imagine beyond the limits of traditional production. The idea is not to replace the storyteller, but to remove what stands between the storyteller and the story.

6. Connect With Us

End the main page with two clear pathways. For Brands: a short invitation for brands looking to create a micro-drama, with the CTA “Talk to Lila.” For Creators: an invitation for AI filmmakers, writers and visual storytellers who want to work with Lila, with the CTA “Join Lila.” These can open simple enquiry/application forms.

7. Footer

Keep the footer clean: Lila Studios logo and “Drama, generated.”, Community links for Instagram, LinkedIn and YouTube, plus About Us, Contact Us, Join Us and Privacy Policy.

Overall experience: The site should be a simple, premium brand experience. It should clearly explain the business, showcase the work and create two conversion routes — brands and creators — while visually borrowing the cinematic, streaming-style feel of the reference websites.
